

Scheme for SMEs

Build Up Your Business With Personal Data Protection

Adopting good personal data protection practices is a business imperative that yields a competitive advantage. Organisations that design their operations around data protection policies can instil accountability in their business processes, bringing their business excellence to the next level.

Why Protect Personal Data?

✓ Reduces operational and reputational risks and costs

✓ Improves business standards, processes and efficiency

✓ Gains consumer trust and confidence

✓ Earns respect from industry peers

✓ Meets regulatory requirements under the PDPA¹

Organisations can approach suitable third party providers for solutions and consultancy services to strengthen their overall data management framework and strategy, and adopt a systematic approach in mitigating risks of unintended personal data disclosure across the data life-cycle.

Practical solutions and services may entail (but are not limited to) the following activities:

- Data management system
- Data inventory mapping process
- Gap analysis and vulnerability assessments
- Risk analysis to enhance security control
- Data management policy
- Automation and streamline of process framework
- Training and audit services

¹ Organisations that collect, use or disclose personal data (of employees, suppliers or customers etc.) would need to put in place processes to meet the obligations under the Personal Data Protection Act 2012.

Capability Development Grant (by SPRING Singapore)

Enables SMEs to grow their business locally and globally.

Defrays up to 70% of qualifying upgrading project costs (e.g. consultancy and training services, assessments and audits, and software adoption).
